

Stereograms

We had a vision for this puzzle, but it is a little out of focus. To wit, the clues for corresponding entries of the two grids are presented together as one clue with no connecting words. This happens in one of two ways:

- Seeing double: The clues are presented in sequence. Either grid's clue could be first or second.
- Crossed eyes: The clues are nested one inside the other. Either grid's clue could be outside or inside.

Note that no square contains the same letter in both grids. If an element of the enumeration only applies to one of the two entries, that element will be italicized.

1-Across will tell you which grid is which, but no clue has been given.
